September was a positive month for equity markets, with indices in the US and Europe hitting record highs. Worries about a recession in the US, which resulted in significant market volatility in August, proved overblown and equities recovered. The tone improved following a 50-basis point (bp) interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve and a 25bp cut by the European Central Bank and hopes there would be further reductions in the cost of borrowing this year.

The size of the interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve was large but has been interpreted by markets as an “insurance” cut to assist the economy following a slight weakening in the employment market rather than a portent of recession. However, the central bank has not provided any clarification on how fast rates will fall and there is an optimistic view in markets about the pace of monetary loosening. The US central bank is generally expected to engineer a soft economic landing – although the pace of interest rates cuts by most central banks is likely to be slower than many in the market currently believe.

Chinese equities also rallied sharply after Beijing unveiled a raft of monetary and fiscal stimulus measures, the largest package since the Covid-19 pandemic. The nation’s economy is teetering on the brink of deflation and there are concerns that a prolonged structural slowdown is in prospect. The measures are aimed at stimulating domestic consumption in the export-dependent economy. The property market support package included a 50bp reduction in average interest rates for existing mortgages, and a cut in the minimum downpayment requirement to 15% on all types of homes. The Federal Reserve’s 50bp cut in rates in the previous week allowed the People’s Bank of China to follow suit without putting too much pressure on the yuan.
